A legend of the Prairie Tribes

Many, many seasons ago, a mighty hunter from the land of eternal cold, captured a beautiful Indian maiden, whose name was Summer, for his bride. Holding her closely, he sped quickly to his far-away home in the north, where he gently sat Summer down upon the snow.

Immediately, her radiant beauty and warm love melted all the ice and snow about her, and flowers and green things grew in abundance.

To this very day, when Summer comes, all signs of the winter's ice and snow disappear, and the flowers grow, the air is warm and all the earth beautiful.
